

Dubuque Telegraph Herald

2-28-10

By Courtney Blanchard

Floor mats, sticky gas pedals, a missing defect code in Toyota's diagnostic computer ... the cause of the sudden acceleration in several Toyota models is not an easy one to nail down.

U.S. Rep. Bruce Braley, D-Iowa, attended a Congressional hearing on the issue last week. Braley said the tone of the hearing changed from the beginning to the end. Yoshimi Inaba, Toyota's North American CEO, opened by asserting they've resolved the issue, but ended by saying more needs to be done.

"I know that local Toyota dealers in Iowa have been working hard to repair recalled vehicles and serve their customers well. However, we will not be able to truly fix these problems without thorough and credible investigations that definitively identify the problem and the solution to the problem," Braley said.